International arbitration is now firmly established as the international business community's preferred method to resolve cross-border disputes. To stay competitive, Japanese companies and practitioners must stay abreast of developments in the field, particularly as the industry adapts to the challenges posed by COVID-19.

Singapore is recognised around the world as an international dispute resolution hub. It is among the world's top three arbitral seats, and the Singapore International Arbitration Centre (SIAC) is one of the world's leading arbitral institutions. This seminar will provide Japanese users with insights into arbitration in Singapore and at SIAC in light of COVID-19, including an overview of the recently released SIAC Guide to virtual hearings, Taking Your Arbitration Remote. Practitioners, arbitrators, and users experienced in arbitration in Singapore and at SIAC will also highlight key takeaways from virtual hearings and the advantages of SIAC for Japanese parties.
